Brummie hunk scoops Father's Day award

TOP OF THE POPS!

ANDY CARTER has been crowned the World's Best Daddy ahead of Father's Day.

Andy, 30, from Aldridge in Birmingham, beat off strong opposition to claim the title, after being nominated by wife Vanessa and kids Caitlin, three, and Harvey, four months.

Andy's campaign had appeared destined for failure after tabloid rumours that he regularly gives Caitlin sweets just before dinner.

But the Carter campaign team hit back with the revelation that he often takes his daughter swimming – and that was enough to sway the vote in Andy's favour. A delighted Vanessa praised her hunky hubbie, who runs a building firm, saying: "He really deserves this award – he's a great husband as well as a good dad.

"He always takes Caitlin to bed and reads her stories and, even when he's really busy, he lets her into the office to do her paperwork – normally on his lap."

The Carter clan sent their hero a special message to celebrate Andy's big day: "Happy Father's Day to the best Daddy in the world!"
